Cory:

Two groups of visitors were here when you called earlier, which made it impossible for me to talk.

Hope all is well in your world. My guess is that auto racing, fishing, and deer/elk hunting are helping to keep you out of trouble when you're not at work.

Repairs to the roof of the caboose are now underway. I took photo No. 7 earlier today. In the days ahead, a new catwalk will be installed as well as a new chimney for the stove.

Watching it rain earlier today on the new and waterproof roof put a big smile on my face.

Best,

SRP

No worries about earlier. Groups of visitors to the third floor of City Hall are almost always a good thing.

Things are fairly slow here in the winter months, but no news can be good news. My younger brothers have returned from their deployment to Egypt, each with an Army Commendation Medal in tow for their actions pertaining to the mission they were on.

If you could, would you be able to send me the photos in an email so I can get those on the Instagram account for the Historical Society and Museum? I'm currently out of photos to add to the account, but putting out some news of the progress made would be a welcome addition to the digital stream of our hundred or so individuals that decided to follow along to see what we have to say and show the world.

Hopefully you're staying well, and more good news continues to make its way into and around Carbondale soon.

Thank you

Cory

From my end, it looks like I did send you the photos--as attachments to the email I sent earlier.

Here they are again.

I'm seeing them now on both ends. The internet connection at work isn't always the best, but I have them now.
